A self-taught designer and sculptor from Colombia, South America, Robert Vengoechea creates contemporary fine jewelry consisting of unique square-shank rings, cast in precious metals using fine colored stones and diamonds. A Master wax carver, Vengoechea casts his own metals and combines them with 18K gold to create a unique geometric shape with precious stones.

His use of colored stones has a dramatic effect when combined with his unusual shaped rings and perfectly captures the life of the stones without compromising the integrity of the design or the shape. Robert mastered the art of sculpting using the “lost wax” method. When designing a commissioned work, he is able to extract from his client their own thoughts and ideas into concrete visual drawings allowing the client to fully interact in the creation of their custom piece, cultivating a feeling of mutual design and accomplishment.

His unique blend of geometric and architectural shapes exhibits an unusual style which, when viewed, is not just fine jewelry, but fine art.
